"PREPARED BY AND FOR THE WALT DISNEY WORLD CAST"

FEBRUARY 15, 1980

A NIGHT IN THE LIFE OF A WATER PAGEANT

Wherever you are in our Vacation Kingdom, you just can't ignore the exciting sounds coming from our Seven Seas Lagoon and Bay Lake every night. The music grows louder and more dynamic and suddenly a dragon appears from beneath the sea, dolphins begin to dance and King Neptune joins the parade. On a "good" night, when our park hours are extended or during a special event, you might even be lucky enough to see fireworks coming out of the waters!

If you've never been a guest at one of our resort areas or never stayed at the Magic Kingdom theme park late enough to catch our nightly Electrical Water Pageant, you've certainly missed an exciting experience. The music is electrical, drawing people to their windows and to the water's edge for a glimpse at a magnificent performance.

But that performance doesn't happen by mere chance. It takes planning and teamwork by a group of professionals who take a great deal of pride in their work.

The Electrical Water Pageant passes by each resort area on the Seven Seas Lagoon and Bay Lake, nightly, from 9 p.m. to 10:10 p.m.

The light show, as it is known to those who work it, was conceived and staged by our Entertainment Division, and any adaptations to the show are still coordinated by Technical Show Development, headed by Tom Craven.

The show itself is maintained by Parade Maintenance. They have the unbelievable job of insuring that every light (and there are 13,615), is working and that the sound is of good quality.

But the day-to-day operation is controlled by the Watercraft Department of Operations. The hosts and hostesses in Watercraft who work the nightly Water Pageant are proud of their role and take every effort to insure the show is presented properly. As one hostess told EYES & EARS, "when you're finally assigned to the Electrical Water Pageant, you know you've made it in Watercraft!"

And you'd better believe it's no easy task keeping that show in line! The Electrical Water Pageant consists of two "strings" of seven barges each. Each barge is equipped with a light show panel and complete sound system. The first barge of each string holds two 50 hp Mercury motors, the last barge holds just one 50 hp Mercury motor. The entire string is dependent on these three motors for operation. When the two strings follow each other on the lake and lagoon "it's like driving a 454-foot snake" according to one Watercraft host.

And except in the case of a special event or fireworks show, the entire Electrical Water Pageant is operated with just five cast members, one at each end of each string and one in the safety whaler that accompanies the light show every night.

The show itself relies on perfect timing . . . and that's up to the host or hostess on the rear barge of each string. They're responsible for hitting the light switches at just the precise moment.

One of the biggest problems the Electrical Water Pageant has to overcome is the effects of the wind. According to the "pros," crosswinds are the worst. And the Electrical Water Pageant goes on rain or shine. The only thing that prohibits the show from running is extremely high winds and electrical storms. Each barge is equipped with lightning rods, but in a severe lightning storm, as we occasionally find in Central Florida, no one wants to find out if they will solve the problem! One element that doesn't seem to affect our light show "pros," however, is cold weather.

When EYES & EARS accompanied the crew on a special event show complete with fireworks, it was cold. But that didn't dampen spirits. "Freezer suits" went on, then jumpsuits, then fireproof capes, then construction helmets and safety goggles. Believe me, when you're standing only inches above the waterline and the wind is blowing hard, 40-degree weather suddenly feels like zero. But the only apparent concern of the hosts and hostesses working that evening's show was keeping the barges in line and not drifting off course. Needless to say, the show looked great, and if there were any errors, you sure fooled us!

It's hats off to an excellent show, and super pros!

Christopher Mohler's assignment for the evening was to drive one string . . . a tricky job on a windy night.

CAST GAS STATION . . . CONVENIENCE FOR YOU

Long before the "gas crunch" hit the country, Walt Disney World Co. began negotiations to build a gas station on the property for the convenience of our cast members. Once all prerequisites were met, construction began and our Cast Gas Station opened in April of 1978.

From the very beginning Walt Disney World Co. held the desire to pass on any savings they received on gasoline to cast members, and have since been selling gasoline at the same price it is purchased. The federal government now allows gas stations to sell gasoline up to 15 cents higher than their purchase price. Since our station operates on a non-profit basis we will continue to return the 15-cent gasoline markup on those days you are entitled to a discount based on our odd-even allocation system.

At the same time we opened, the federal government imposed strict allocations on gas stations. And just like every other station, once we use that allotment up we don't have gasoline for the remainder of the month. For that reason we have continued to sell gasoline on an odd-even system with a maximum purchase limit. Whenever possible, we will increase the purchase limit. At the present time the purchase limit has been increased to $8.50 every other day (determined by the odd-even cycle).

We need your help to continue to stretch those gallons. Let's all do our share to conserve fuel by carpooling, vanpooling, and taking our Express Bus Service. Let's plan ahead and conserve!

LETTERS TO US

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Bob Matheison, Vice President, Operations. We would like to share it with everyone.

Dear Mr. Matheison:

My family and I just returned from a delightful two-day stay at Walt Disney World. We had heard from our friends that Walt Disney World was a beautiful place, but their comments did not begin to tell the story.

The theme presented by Walt Disney through the years has been hope, magic, love, and the promise of tomorrow, and almost every attraction continued that theme.

The past 20 years have taken their toll on most young Americans and many of the older ones, too . . . the atmosphere at Walt Disney World restored our spirits. It gave to our children the feeling we had as children during the forties, of a promise of tomorrow. It made them understand what we have been trying to instill in them during the past years.

Please don't lose the magic of Disney in your future attractions. It is very special. Thank you sincerely for your contribution to America and all Americans.

Sincerely,
Eleanor C. Dunkle
Marianna, Florida

To our Walt Disney World cast members: Thank you so much for the beautiful flowers to help cheer me while I was in the hospital.

Chris White

"It Takes People"

With the expansion of our construction program, future developments at EPCOT Center and our increasing involvement with governmental and regulatory agencies, the Labor Relations role at Walt Disney World Co. has increased. And to better serve this expanding area of our Company, Bill Ward was recently promoted to Director of Labor Relations.

In his new role, Bill will have the responsibility for all operational and construction Labor Relations activities which include contract administration, arbitration, and interface with various government agencies.

Bill has quite an extensive background in Labor Relations. After leaving his home in Massachusetts, for Florida to and receive a B.S. in Liberal Arts with an emphasis in Business at Florida State University, Bill attended the University of Maryland School of Law, receiving a J.D. Degree in 1969. Throughout his law school days, Bill worked in Labor Relations at B. & O. - C. & O. Railroad, his interest in Labor Relations due in part to his father-in-law's influence. Once he passed the Maryland Bar exam in 1970, Bill joined the Roper Corporation. After a year in their appliance division in Labor Relations, he was moved to their outdoor power products division where he spent three years handling the entire responsibility of personnel and labor relations in that part of their company.

To expand his knowledge, Bill moved to another corporation, working in their Labor Relations Department on a corporate level before returning to Roper as their Director of Labor Relations. It wasn't too long before he was promoted to vice president of their entire personnel division.

Bill's expertise expanded further when he joined a Dayton, Ohio, company as their Director of Labor Relations, and again found himself promoted within the year to Vice President of Personnel. When the opportunity presented itself to Bill to join our cast and return to the sunshine of Florida, he didn't hesitate. He found the idea of working with so many challenges and different types of people "intriguing." Bill was promoted to Director of Labor Relations in January of 1980, having joined our cast as Manager of Labor Relations in December 1978.

In his new position, Bill will be working closely with our E.O. Programs, as well as our EPCOT project to help with the construction effort.

Bill feels that to be successful in the Labor Relations field you must have a good feeling for people and their problems. He feels that after the contract negotiations ends, his main role is to insure that all sides comply with the agreements made and to insure that the best interests of the people involved are upheld.

When Bill is not keeping busy at work, he finds time for his family and had enjoyed coaching hockey and basketball in the past for his son's teams. He also enjoys playing a game of golf or tennis whenever possible. And he really loves sailing . . . in fact he hopes to buy his own sailboat this year.
